THE DEATH LIST OF A WEEK

EX-COUNTY COMMISSIONER JAS DEVINE PASSES AWAY.

Sad Story of the Ending of Life of Clarence Blocher, Prominent Littlestown Man.

JAMES DEVINE died at his home in Conowago township on Monday evening, All Saints Day, aged 79 years, 3 months and 24 days. Mr. Devine had lived an exemplary christian life, faithful in all his relations, a good husband and father and a useful citizen, esteemed by all who knew him. For forty years he managed the Conowago Chapel farm and earned the approval of those he served by his faithfulness to his work and his intelligent management. In the fall of 1896 he was elected County Commissioner of Adams county, and in this position displayed those qualities of faithfulness and attention to business that marked his whole life. He is survived by his wife, with whom he celebrated more than the golden anniversary of married life, four sons and two daughters, Wm. P. Devine, of Hanover; James Devine, of Edge Grove; Eugene Devine, of Littlestown; Harry Devine, of Bittinger; Mrs. Sarah Koehler, of Reisterstown, and Mrs. Annie Sneringer of the Chapel farm.

CLARENCE BLOCHER'S death, as reported last week was a shock not only to the people of Littlestown but throughout county wherever he was known. He was one of the well known citizens of Littlestown and a prominent business man.

The dead man's family are prostrated over his act of self destruction and there was no apparent reason for the deed. There had been some disagreement between the deceased and his brother Charles, who have been carrying on the coach making business, the deceased insisting that the place of business be closed and had been shut down for five years. The brother tried to solve the situation by proposing to buy the interest of deceased in the establishment or sell to him and on Monday of last week, the day before the act, the two came to Gettysburg and had J. L. Butt, Esq., draw up the papers by which Clarence Blocher sold his interest in the coach making business to Charles Blocher and partnership was dissolved. The dead man was wholly rational during the transaction of the business here. He was in good spirits and that he was contemplating suicide was not betrayed in the slightest manner.

After the death of Thaddeus S. Blocher, some years ago, the coach-making business was continued by four of his sons—Clarence, Harry, Charles and Howard, all practical mechanics, who were associated with their father in the business. Some time thereafter Harry and Howard withdrew, the former to engage in other work, and the latter, having been elected a Justice of the Peace in that borough, to give his attention to the duties of the office and other affairs in which he was interested. The business, under the name of T. S. Blocher & Sons, has been carried on by the two brothers, Clarence and Charles.

Intimate friends of the suicide state that he had been in a melancholy mood for several weeks, and seemed to be greatly troubled. For this reason, it is said he was watched closely, for fear he might be led to attempt something rash. After the papers of dissolution of partnership had been signed there seemed to be no further cause for alarm, as this was the only matter which might have preyed on his mind.

It is said that the dead man talked with his wife only a short time before going to the shed to commit the deed, which was about 11:30 a. m., leaving the house, however, without any intimation that he would not return. The finding of the body was brought about by an inquiry from the store of George W. Kump, where Mr. Blocher had been measured for a suit of clothes. The coat being ready to be fitted, Mr. Blocher was sent for. Having just left the house a short while before, Mrs. Blocher went in search of her husband and was horrified upon opening the door of the shed to find the dead body suspended by a cord from the rafters.

The deceased, aged about 50 years, was the eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Blocher, and was married to a daughter of Andrew Long, of Littlestown, who survives him, with four children—Jra. of Harrisburg; Thaddeus, of York; and Leroy and Miss Helen Blocher, at home. A Guest

GEN. O. O. HOWARD DEAD

COMMANDED 11TH CORPS AT BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG

Frequent Visitor to this Place—Brief Story of His Life.

Major General Oliver O. Howard, U. S. A. retired, last of the great Union commanders in the Civil War, prominent in the Battle of Gettysburg and a warm friend and frequent visitor to Gettysburg, and one of the greatest Indian fighters in the history of the country, died suddenly of heart disease at twenty minutes past seven o'clock Tuesday night, when seated in a chair in his home at No. 156 College street, Burlington, Vt. He had returned Monday from a lecture trip in Canada and appeared to be in excellent health. In recent years General Howard devoted almost all his energies to the upbuilding of Lincoln University, a school for the youths of the mountain region of the south. This project was closest to his heart and his lecture, "Abraham Lincoln," was delivered in all parts of the country in order to raise money for the endowment of the institution, which he intended as a perpetual memorial to Mr. Lincoln, who was his good friend.

A Distinguished Career.

General Oliver Otis Howard was a native of Leeds, Maine, where he was born November 8, 1830. He was graduated at Bowdoin College in 1850, and at the United States Military Academy in 1854. Upon his graduation he became first lieutenant and instructor of mathematics at the academy.

When Fort Sumter was fired upon he raised a Maine regiment and commanded a brigade at the opening of the war at Bull Run. Forming the rear guard his line turned back the Confederate cavalry and saved Washington. For gallantry in that engagement he was made brigadier general of volunteers.

He was twice wounded at the battle of Fair Oaks, losing his arm on June 1, 1862. He was engaged in recruiting service until September of that year, when he participated in the battle of Antietam, and afterward took General John Sedgwick's division in the Second Corps.

In November he became major general of volunteers. He commanded the Eleventh Corps during General Joseph Hooker's operations in the vicinity of Fredericksburg, May 2, 1863; served bravely at Gettysburg, Lookout Valley and Missionary Ridge, and was on the expedition for the relief of Knoxville in 1863.

Commanded at Gettysburg.

By the death of General Reynolds on the first day of the battle of Gettysburg he was left in sole command of the two army corps from 9 a. m. until 4:30 p. m. His force captured 4,000 prisoners and four confederate generals, and when his force had been reduced from 30,000 to 20,000 men he successfully repelled more than twice that number of General Lee's veterans. For this he received the thanks of Congress.

On the second day of Gettysburg he thrice asked General Meade to plant batteries on Little Round Top, the delay to do which was so nearly fatal to the Union army. General Howard commanded the artillery at the cemetery, and for three nights he slept with his head pillowed on a grave.

From December 1863, until July, 1864, General Howard was in occupation of Chattanooga. Then, at the suggestion of Generals Grant and Sherman, he was assigned to the army of the Tennessee in the invasion of Georgia. He and General Sherman, occupying the same tent, planned and executed the great march to the sea. He was engaged at Dalton, Resaca, Adamsville and Pickett's Mill, where he was again wounded. He was at the surrender of Atlanta, and joined in the pursuit of the Confederates in Alabama, under General John B. Hood, from October 4 until December 14, 1864.

He became brigadier-general in the United States army December 21, 1864. He was subsequently employed in all the important battles until April 29, 1865. In March of that year he was brevetted major-general for gallantry at the battle of Ezra Church and the campaigns against Atlanta.

In May, 1865, he was placed at the head of the Freedmen's Bureau, his duties lasting until 1874, when he was assigned to the department of Columbia. In 1877 he led the expedition against the Nez Perces Indians, and in 1878 he led the campaign against the Bannocks and Plutes.

In 1881-2 General Howard was superintendent of the United States Military academy, and in 1886 was commissioned major general and given command of the division of the Pacific. A few years later he was transferred to the command of the Atlantic department, and on November 8, 1894, he was retired from active service by the operation of the age limit.

During the years following his retirement General Howard gave much of his time and attention to the subject of negro education. He was the founder of the Lincoln Memorial University at Cumberland Gap, Tenn., and a warm friend of the school at Manassas and of other institutions for the uplifting of the negro. He was also active in the temperance movement and other Christian work.

One of the general's biographers, in speaking of his democratic ways, says: "General Howard will long be remembered both by those who were with him in campaigns and by those who have encountered him under more peaceful circumstances, as one of the most accessible officers in the service. He took his stand on this question while still a cadet at West Point, in a paper in which he discussed the relative advantages of the martinet system as contrasted with the paternal attitude. Young Howard insisted that a practice of the latter policy was certain to secure the most satisfactory results, and his practice in later life conformed as strictly to that as it did uniformly to his other convictions."

Bowdoin college bestowed upon General Howard the degree of A. M. in 1853; Waterville college, LL.D., in 1865; Shurtleiff college, the same, in 1865, and Gettysburg Theological seminary in 1896. In 1864 he was made chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the French government.

General Howard wrote extensively for magazines and published two books, "Donald's School days" (1879) and "Chief Joseph: or the Nez Percés in Peace and War" (1881).

L. M. Buehler's Unusual Offer.

"It isn't often that I have faith enough in the medicine put up by other people to be willing to offer to refund the money if it does not cure," said L. M. Buehler to a COMPILER man who dropped into his store, "but I am glad to sell Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia on that basis."

"The Dr. Howard Company in order to get a quick introductory sale, authorizes me to sell their regular fifty cent bottles at half-price, 25 cents, and, although I have sold a lot of it, and have guaranteed every package, not one has been brought back as unsatisfactory."

There are sixty doses in a vial that can be carried in the vest pocket or purse, and every one has more medicinal power than a big pill or tablet or a tumbler of mineral water.

"I am still selling the specific at half-price, although I cannot tell how long I shall be able to do so, and anyone who is subject to constipation, sick headache, dizziness, liver trouble, indigestion or a general play-out condition, ought to take advantage of this chance."

Better Train Schedule

The Retail Merchant Association has been proving from the start, that it was an organization well worth the support of every one in any kind of business in Gettysburg, and last week added another to the things it has been doing. The Railroad Committee on Friday met in this place, General Passenger Agent F. M. Howell, and Superintendent J. A. Shepard. The committee explained to these officials the inconvenience of the present train schedule, that it prevented traveling men from coming here, because of the length of time they must stay here, and that it takes a whole day for any one in county to attend to business in Gettysburg, or to any citizen of county seat to go to any point along the railroad.

The officials gave the committee to understand that they appreciated the situation, and that it was possible to run a train from York to Gettysburg, to arrive at noon, and leave Gettysburg on the return trip at 1:30, and this the committee admitted would give the desired convenience to the traveling public. The officials said they would recommend to General Manager Robertson, such a change in the schedule. It is believed that their suggestion will be acted upon at an early date.

50TH BATTLE ANNIVERSARY

COMMISSION MET IN HARRISBURG LAST WEEK

New Member Col. Dixon of Franklin County was Wounded at Battle of Gettysburg.

The Gettysburg Battle 50th Anniversary Commission met in Harrisburg on Monday of last week. The Commissioners were the guests of Governor Stuart at lunch and the Governor was present during the meeting of the Commission. All the members of the Commission with the new member, General Louis Wagner and Colonel R. Dale Benson of Philadelphia; Colonel Lewis T. Brown and Irvin K. Campbell of Pittsburg; Major Alexander McDowell of Sharon; Colonel R. Bruce Ricketts of Wilkes-Barre; ex-Senator William Penn Lloyd of Mechanicsburg; Rev. John Richards Royle of Reading; Colonel W. D. Dixon of St. Thomas.

The new member is Col. W. D. Dixon of St. Thomas, Franklin county, in place of General Brooke of Philadelphia, who resigned. Col. Dixon may be said to be the local representative of the committee, coming from Franklin county, in the same Senatorial district with Adams. The appointment of Col. Dixon is specially fitting in that he is not only a veteran who saw severe service, engaged in a number of battles and repeatedly wounded, but because one of the wounds was received at the battle of Gettysburg.

At the Harrisburg meeting of the Commission the following letter from the Retail Merchants' Association of Gettysburg was read and answer was directed.

To the Honorable Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg Commission. Gentlemen:—

At a meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of Gettysburg on Sept. 24th, 1909, it was unanimously resolved that the Association tender their services to your commission for any purposes that they may be available to further your plans.

Respectfully yours, G. L. KIEFFER, Asst. Secy. Retail Merchants Assn.

Reading, Pa., Oct. 26, 1909. G. L. Kieffer, Esq., Secy., Gettysburg, Pa.

Dear Sir: At a meeting of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg Commission held in Harrisburg yesterday, the action of the Merchants' Association of Gettysburg respecting the Commission was reported and I was directed to express to the Association the Commission's thanks for the same.

Yours respectfully, J. RICHARDS BOYLE, Secy.

Tentative plans for the big celebration to be held in 1913 were presented and discussed at the meeting. The commissioners thought that it would be most fitting to hold the celebration on the dates of the battle and to have noted speakers to address the people, for a military demonstration and for the presence of the Governors of all the States. The President of the United States will also be invited and Pennsylvania officialdom will be largely represented.

The Commission decided to hold their next meeting, the date of which has not yet been fixed, at Gettysburg, in order to fully understand the situation here in making arrangements.

THE NOVEMBER MAGAZINES

A MEMORY OF THE LINCOLN ADDRESS AT GETTYSBURG.

Wayne MacVeagh's Recollections of America's Most Remarkable Piece of Oratory.

The November "Century" will publish a sketch of Wayne MacVeagh, giving his personal memories of the delivery of Lincoln's Gettysburg address, and of the impression it created. Part of his narrative follows:

The address of Mr. Everett seemed to me then, as it has whenever I have read it since, perfectly adapted to the occasion, and exactly what such an oration ought to be. It was of necessity elaborate and long, because it involved a complete justification of the war then in progress and a graphic and detailed description of the battle which had been so recently fought where we were standing; but it was eminently scholarly and eloquent; the classic product of a mind familiar with the masterpieces of all oratory, ancient and modern, and at its conclusion I think every intelligent person who heard it must have felt most favorably impressed with the manner in which the duty imposed upon Mr. Everett had been discharged.

At its close, as I remember, there was a short interval of music, and then Mr. Lincoln was presented, as only to accept, in a few formal words, the cemetery in behalf of the nation. As he came forward, he seemed to me, and I was sitting near to him, visibly to dominate the scene, and while over his plain and rugged countenance appeared to settle a great melancholy, it was somewhat lightened as by a great hope. As he began to speak, I instinctively felt that the occasion was taking on a new grandeur, as of a great moment in history, and then there followed, in slow and very impressive and far-reaching utterance, the words with which the whole world has long been familiar. As each word was spoken, it appeared to me so clearly fraught with a message not only for us of his day, but for the untold generations of men, that before he concluded I found myself possessed by a reverential awe for its complete justification of the great war he was conducting, as if conducted, as in truth it was, in the interest of mankind. Surely at that moment he justified the inspired portraiture of Lowell:

Great captains with their guns and drums,

Disturb our judgment for the hour, But at last silence comes;

These are all gone, and, standing like a tower,

Our children shall behold his fame.

The kindly earnest, brave, foreseeing man,

Sagacious, patient, dreading praise, not blame,

New birth of our new soil, the first American.

And now comes the only inexplicable part of this statement. I waited until the distinguished guests who wished to do so had spoken to him, and then I said to him with great earnestness, "You have made an immortal address."

To which he quickly replied: "Oh, you must not say that. You must not be extravagant about it."

Others then came around him, and I did not see him again until on the train on our way home. He was suffering from a severe headache, and lying down in the drawing room, with his forehead bathed in cold water. He had sent for me, as I knew, to renew our talk of the day before, but I could not restrain myself from saying to him: "You did not like what I said this morning about your address, and I have thought it carefully over, and I can only say that the words you spoke will live with the land's language."

He answered: "You are more extravagant than ever, and you are the only person who has such a misconception of what I said; but I did not send for you to talk about my address, but about more important matters."

I had told him on the way from Washington that I should be obliged to leave him at Hanover Junction on the return journey to keep a professional engagement of importance; and it was probably for that reason that he sent for me so soon after leaving Gettysburg. We then discussed at some length the matter he wished to talk over, and I shortly afterward left the train and returned to Philadelphia.

I looked at the next day's newspapers with some eagerness, and was greatly surprised to find no such adequate recognition as I thought due to his address; and yet I could not persuade myself that I had really exaggerated his true character.

Judge Lindsey's Fight for Children.

I sat down at the big table with the Governor at my right (twice Judge Lindsey), the Mayor at my left, and the president of the Board of Supervisors and Police Commissioner Wilson at the other end of the table. The judges seated themselves in the chairs about the room. We allowed no newspaper reporters in, because I knew what sort of vile and uncharitable news they would be spreading. Mickey, the reporter, was standing up with his hands on his hips, and his mouth open, as if he were about to say something.

O. J. was a boy, and I had been told that he was the only one who had been allowed to stay in the room.

I had been told that he was the only one who had been allowed to stay in the room.

I had been told that he was the only one who had been allowed to stay in the room.

I had been told that he was the only one who had been allowed to stay in the room.

ease. I started each by asking him how often he had been in jail, what he had seen there, and so forth. Then I sat back and let him tell his story.

And the things they told would raise your hair. I saw the blushes rise to the foreheads of some of the ministers at the first details. As we went on, the perspiration stood on their faces. Some sat pale, staring appalled at these freckled youngsters from whose lips, in a sort of infantile eagerness to tell all they knew, there came stories of beastiality that were the more horrible because they were so innocently, so boldly given. It was enough to make a man weep; and indeed tears of compassionate shame came to the eyes of more than one father there as he listened. One boy broke down and when he told of the vile indecencies that had been committed upon him by the older criminals; and I saw the muscles working in the clenched jaws of some of our "investigating committee"—saw them swallowing the lump in the throat—saw them looking down at the floor blinking, afraid of losing their self-control. The Police Commissioner made the mistake of cross-examining the first boy, but the frank answers he got only exposed worse matters. The boys came and came, till at last a Catholic priest, Father O'Ryan, cried out, "My God! I have had enough!" Governor Peabody said hoarsely, "I never knew there was such immorality in the world!" Some one else put in, "It's awful—awful!" in a half groan.

"Gentlemen," I said, "there have been over two thousand Denver boys put through those jails and those conditions in the last five years. Do you think it should go on any longer?"

Governor Peabody rose. "No," he said, "no." Never in my life have I heard of so much rot—corruption—vileness—as I've heard to-day from the mouths of these babies. I want to tell you that nothing I can do in my administration can be of more importance—nothing I can do will I do more gladly than sign those bills that Judge Lindsey is trying to get through the legislature to do away with these terrible conditions. And if," he said, turning to the Police Commissioner, "Judge Lindsey is 'crazy,' I want my name written under his, among the crazy people. And if anyone says these boys are 'lars,' that man is a liar himself!"—The Beast and the Jungle, in the November "Everybody's."

Slavery that Brings an Enormous Revenue to the Mexican Government.

Some astounding statements are made by John Kenneth Turner in the November "American Magazine," writing under the title of "Barbarous Mexico," a country he has visited for a period of two years to collect the data which he has embodied into his remarkable series of articles. Of a certain phase of the deportation of the Yaqui Indians by the Mexican Government, Mr. Turner says:

"The secret which lies at the roots of the whole Yaqui affair was revealed to me and the whole matter summed up in a few words by a colonel in the Mexican army, I none of the most remarkable interviews which I obtained during my entire trip to Mexico.

"For the past four years this officer has been one of those in immediate charge of transporting all the Yaqui exiles to Yucatan. I was fortunate enough to take passage on the same steamer with him returning from Progreso to Vera Cruz. He is a stout, comfortable, talkative old campaigner of about sixty years. The steamship people put us in the same state room, and as the colonel had some government passes which he hoped to sell me we were soon on the most confidential terms.

"In the past three and one-half years," he told me, "I have delivered just fifteen thousand seven hundred Yaquis in Yucatan—delivered, mind you, for you must remember that the government never allows me enough expense money to feed them properly, and from ten to twenty per cent, die on the journey.

"These Yaquis," he said, "sell in Yucatan for $65 apiece—men, women and children. Who gets the money? Well $10 goes to me for my services. The rest is turned over to the Secretary of War. This, however, is only a drop in the bucket, for I know this to be a fact, that every foot of land, every building, every cow, every burro, everything left behind by the Yaquis when they are carried away by the soldiers, is appropriated for his private use by the official in authority of the locality from which they have been removed.

"So according to this man, who has himself made at least $157,000 out of the business, the Yaquis are being deported for the money there is in it—first, the money from the appropriation of their property, second, the money from the sale of their bodies, the third, to me that the deportations would never stop until the last possible dollar had been squeezed out of the business."

The World Wants Strong Men.

What the world wants is men made of the gritty material that Peary and Cook are made of, the material which comes up again and again and wrests triumph from defeat, says Orison Scott Marden in "Success Magazine." Six times did Peary try to realize his North Pole vision. How many men are there in this country would have tried the seventh time? Not one in thousands would have attempted it even the second time.

Twice before had Cook tried to reach the North Pole and once the South Pole, but neither failure, suffering, nor the pleadings of friends could wean him from his North Pole vision. A man who had the grit when a boy to peddle milk and do all sorts of things in order to earn money to study medicine and become a doctor, a man who had bull dog grit and a dreamer's willingness to take chances, could not easily be turned back. It is ever the man who cannot be weaned from his aim that makes history.

The real test of character is what a man does after he fails. What will he next do? What resources, what inventiveness, will his failure arouse in him? Will it discover new sources of power, will it bring out reserves, double his determination, or will it dishearten him?

There are varying degrees of persistency. Some men start out with great zeal, but turn back at their first defeat, while failures only enhearten others, call out their reserves, and make them all the more resolute, determined, to win. For some men every defeat is a Waterloo for the man who has clear grit, for the man who persists, who never knows when he is beaten. Those who are bound to win never think of defeat as final. They look upon it as a mere slip. They get up after each failure with new resolution, more determination than ever to go on until they win.

Two Views of Motherhood

Some years ago, an American friend and I were passing through a street in the city of Tokyo, says Adachi Kinoshuke in the DELINATOR for November. We came upon a gateway which smiled like a May-day festival, and, like it, was full of people.

"What's all this fuss about?" my friend asked me. "Have they hit a gold mine?" No they had not. To the good people the occasion meant a great deal more than the discovery of gold. It was the coming of a baby. The proud parents were sending out messengers into the four corners of the city, announcing the glad tidings of exceeding great joy. And I told my American friend:

"Do you people make such a fuss about a baby? Babies are born every day in this country, aren't they?"

Which was true. But we look upon this matter entirely in a different way. It may be that this is one of the relics of the past, but we put emphasis upon the continuation of a family line. Confucius, whose ghost is much more powerful in Japan of to-day than all the prophets and philosophers now living put together, made childlessness a just ground for divorce. The coming of a baby means to a mother more than meat, aye, more than a fashionable garment. It is the social insignium with the Japanese mother; nothing defines her social rank as finally as the baby.

The Nippon society is heartless to the childless mother: it brands her as "the stone woman;" it exposes her to the galling pity of all her more favored sisters. In the sterner days of the samurai ideal, she was an object to be shunned, like a leper. The childless mother did not dare impose herself upon society. A rather far cry from the fashionable Fifth Avenue atmosphere, isn't it?

Roosevelt Finds "Immense Quantities" of Game.

It is hard for one who has not himself seen it to realize the immense quantities of game to be found on the Kapiti Plains and Athi Plains and the hills that bound them. The common game of the plains, the animals of which I saw most while at Kitanga and in the neighborhood, were the zebra, wildebeest, hartebeest, Grant's gazelle, and "Tommies" or Thompson's gazelle; the zebra, and the hartebeest, usually known by the Swahili name of kongoni, being by far the most plentiful. Then there were impalla, mountain reedbuck, duiker, steinbuck, and diminutive dikdik. As we travelled and hunted we were hardly ever out of sight of game; and on Pease's farm itself there were many thousands head; and so there were on Slater's. If wealthy men who desire sport of the most varied and interesting kind would purchase farms like these they could get, for much less money, many times the interest and enjoyment a deer-forest or grouse-moor can afford.

Unless there was something special on, like a lion or rhinoceros-hunt, I usually rode off followed only by my sons and gun-bearers. I cannot describe the beauty and the unceasing interest of these rides, through the teeming herds of game. It was like retracing the steps of time for sixty or seventy years, and being back in the days of Cornwallis Harris and Gordon Cumming, in the palmy times of the giant fauna of South Africa big game. On Pease's own farm one day I passed through scores of herds of the beautiful and wonderful wild creatures I have spoken of above; all told there were several thousands of them. With the exception of the wildebeest, most of them were not shy, and I could have taken scores of shots at a distance of a couple of hundred yards of thereabout. Of course, I did not shoot at anything unless we were out of meat or needed the skin for the collection; and when we took the skin we almost always took the meat too, for the porters, although they had their rations of rice, depended for much of their well-being on our success with the rifle.—From "African Game Trails," by Theodore Roosevelt, in the November Scribner.

One Actress's Experience.

Surely the actor may be forgiven his frantic desire to appear on Broadway—after an experience like that of the actress who tells her story in the "Woman's Home Companion" for November. It must have been a deep devotion to art which could survive an experience like this.

The most amazing was my discovery that the ancient ban against the players, which existed in Rome and persisted with the Puritans, is still in force in certain places in "enlightened America." A New England hotel-man told me that many a player's pretty flat in New York is furnished with towels marked "Hotel Majestic," and spoons stamped "Hotel Newman." I'm afraid there's a grain of truth in what he says. But I've seen ash-trays and such things in some college rooms that wouldn't bear too close inspection. I've never heard, however, that college-men were refused admittance to every hotel in town, as "undesirable citizens." Yet that actually happened to me in a certain town in Ohio.

When I reached the town in question—it bears the same name as the seat of a famous university—I was ill. I climbed into a carriage at the station with my maid, and told the driver to take us to the better of the two hotels the town boasted.

"It's no use, miss," he said. "They won't neither of 'em take you."

I was dumbfounded, and persisted in my request. The driver, however, was right. Not only would neither hotel take me, though I fancy I didn't look disreputable even if I did look ill, but neither would so much as give me supper. They could not cater to "show-people," the proprietors said. I then told the driver to go along the streets, stopping wherever there was a sign of a boarding-house. After a while, the driver informed me brusquely that he'd "got to feed his hosses an' get back to the depot," so my maid and I were dumped out into the cold, dark, muddy streets, with two heavy hand-bags, in a strange town.

Adams County Airship.

Enoch S. Lefevre, of Littlestown, this county, with his brother, Rev. W. D. Lefevre, of Dover, Del., has invented an airship and has secured a patent on the machine which it is claimed will soar higher and carry heavier loads than any airship yet built. The machine has a vertical mast fastened to the bottom. Near the upper end of the mast are stationary aeroplanes with controllable slats that can be thrown open when the craft is to descend and closed when going forward or ascending. Underneath the stationary planes are eight vertically lifting propellers. Four revolve like large kites around the central mast in one direction discharging air underneath each other. This affords each plane a stronger body of air to float upon than the air it gathers in itself. The two inventors claim that their machine when built will be capable of carrying large loads.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS

Gettysburg People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them.

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment.

Passages are frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is constant day and night. Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, backache and urinary disorders. Gettysburg evidence proves this statement.

Mrs. Sarah Hamilton, 60 Breckenridge St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I endured much misery from disordered kidneys for a long time and was unable to find anything that would give me relief. I was very nervous, suffered from headaches and at times had sharp, shooting pains throughout my body. The passages of the kidney secretions were also very irregular. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at the People's Drug Store and used them. I improved from the first and am today in better health than before in years. I give Doan's Kidney Pills my heartiest endorsement.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

BOUND TO GET THAT BARGAIN

Determined Woman Shopper Would Not Let Little Thing Like Closing Time Interfere.

"You're too late," said the man. "they're closing up." The woman looked at the door of the store where a boy was drawing down a curtain. "It's not six o'clock," she said determinedly. "they can't close till six o'clock. Wait here for me." She tried the door and found it opened to her hand.

The woman went in and found a scene of confusion. Shoppers were being skillfully hustled toward the door with due respect to their feelings, and down every aisle people were covering the counters with protecting covers.

Young women with mouthfuls of hatpins scowled at her and continued to put on their hats. Men in shirt sleeves who were carefully protecting the stock looked at her and said things to each other.

A procession of employees passed on its way to outer air and freedom and clouds of dust arose.

Outside the man stood on one leg and watched the curtained door. He tried to give himself the air of one waiting for a car, and hoped nobody would mistake him for a Johnnie waiting at the door for the ladies to get through work.

The stragglers grew fewer and fewer. The door opened less frequently to let them out. And at last through the door came the woman in triumph. She had a package in her hand and did not seem to observe that the man who let her out muttered and slammed the door after her, securely locking it.

"I've got it," she said triumphantly. "You see I just had to. The sale was only for to-day, and all their 50-cent ribbon was reduced to 39 cents."

FLOWER OF THE TEA PLANT

Said to Be Superior to the Leaves in Flavor and Hard to Adulterate.

It seems that the flower of the tea plant is much to be preferred to the leaf, says the Scientific American. The infusion of the flower is very sweet and has the same stimulating qualities as the infusion of the leaves. Moreover, the flower contains only about two per cent. caffeine, while the leaf contains as much as four per cent.

Tea leaves must be picked one by one; the flowers, on the contrary, are collected much more simply. The principal quality of the flower is the difficulty of imitating it.

Imitations of leaves are innumerable. Most astonishing adulterations of tea leaves are practiced in China. The oak, the eglantine, the ash, the strawberry, the laurel, the cherry, the chestnut, the olive, the elm, the apple and the plum—in fact, almost every tree that grows—offers its leaves freely to unscrupulous dealers for mixture. Even ordinary wood sawdust, properly colored, has been employed.

Fancy teas are adulterated with clay and other mineral substances. The tea flower is more or less proof against imitation.

Tributes of Affection for Paris Dead. Foreign visitors to the cemetery of Pere La Chaise in Paris often wonder at the tributes of affection deposited on the graves. Many French people refuse to believe that their dead cannot enjoy the good things they used to like when alive.

Mothers bring fruits and sweets and leave them on the tombstones of their children. The graves of older people are frequently spread with wine, beer and tobacco, and there is (or was last year) one affectionate father who leaves a potato salad on his son's tombstone every Sunday. Parisian street prowlers are of course well aware of this practice, and despite the vigilance of the cemetery guardians manage to pilfer many a meal from the graves.

Verse Stirred His Memory.

A young married woman recently took her little boy with her to make a call. As they were about to leave the youngster faced one corner of the room, stretched out both his arms, muttered something and then shook hands with the hostess. Naturally she was unable to understand the child's strange behavior and asked his mother the reason.

"Oh, that's all right," she replied. "George uses one hand just as well as the other and he has to face the north and say a little verse which I taught him before he can distinguish the right from the left. I have told him not to shake hands with his left, so he has to do that first."

The Culture of the Age.

We are now passing through the age of the Distribution of Knowledge. The spread of the English-speaking race since 1850 and the cheapness of printing, have brought in primers and handbooks by the million. All the books of the older literatures are being abstracted and sown abroad in popular editions. The magazines fulfill the same function; every one of them is a penny cyclopedia.—John Jay Chapman, "Emerson and Other Essays."

He Didn't Care.

"See how fair and white your sister's complexion is, Robbie," said the mother.

"Well, I suppose my face would be the same way if I kept washing it every day like sister does!" was the youngster's reply.

Governors of Pennsylvania

ROBERT EMORY PATTISON—1883-1887—1891-1895.

Robert Emory Pattison was the son of a Methodist Episcopal clergyman and was born in 1850 at Quantico, Md., where his father was stationed at the time. He was educated in the public schools in Philadelphia and afterward studied law under the Hon. Lewis C. Cassidy. He was admitted to the bar in 1872. Five years later he was elected controller of Philadelphia. He was only twenty-seven years of age at the time, and so successful was his administration that he was re-elected in 1880 by a large majority. Mr. Pattison made a whirlwind campaign when he ran for governor the first time covering 1,400 miles and speaking in forty counties in two weeks' time. He was elected by a plurality of over 40,000. Four years later he was re-elected. Each time he was the candidate of the Democratic party. He was defeated for governor in 1902.

EDUCATIONAL MEETINGS

TEACHERS ARE DISCUSSING A NUMBER OF GOOD SUBJECTS.

Public and School Directors Should Take a Look at Things Through Teachers' Eyes.

At the second educational meeting of the teachers of Cumberland township at Pitzer's school, it was decided that the school directors be interviewed as to a day to visit schools. It was also decided in case of inclement weather the educational meetings will be held on first pretty evening following except Saturday.

The program of three topics was discussed by the teachers the pupils interspersing singing and recitations. The first topic "Geography" was discussed by Miss Mable Bollinger, who was of the opinion that of the three divisions, physical, descriptive and mathematical that the first should be given the preference in our county schools and taught in preference to Civil Government.

Algebra and some other branches. Willis Appled declared that Geography had a three fold task. First telling the process by which the changes of the earth were made, second the features of the earth in this our day and third how these features influence mankind. The children should be taken on a Friday afternoon and shown the slopes, mountains, streams, the work of water and ice. They will not forget impressions so received and they will help the child to understand better what is in the books.

The second topic, "School Grounds" was treated by John Black, as to their size and location, pupils on the ground and teachers duty on the ground. The country school grounds are too small and should be at least two acres and the districts should increase the grounds and expense ought not to be heavy. Location of school should not be along streams. The children should be on play grounds at recess and dinner and teacher should see to it that they are there and should take a part in the play. There should be a well on every school ground and neighbors should not be bothered.

In the discussion that followed H. Bream referred to President Taft saying all cities should provide room for children to play" and if children of the city should have large play grounds where land is scarce why should not country schools have large playgrounds where land is plenty and cheap. If a teacher applies for a position in a large school such as Normal or Grade school the first question he will be asked is can you coach a game of ball and the place to learn out-door games is on the school grounds and they should be large enough so that a good game of ball can be played without difficulty. He urged all teachers to be on the play ground to help the children at their games.

The last topic was, The Use or Need of a Library in Our Country School, and Miss Mary Bream said one of the aims of the teacher should be to instill into the minds of the child the love of good literature, and the teacher should help in the selection of the books to be read by the children. Howard Bream said there were cases in which parents were opposed to children reading many books besides their text books, but the day was coming when there would be libraries in the school house. The successful man in the world is the one who reads and keeps up with the times, and reading of good books should begin when the child is young.

The next meeting in Cumberland township will be at Belmont school house, Nov. 5, Laura Raffensperger, teacher, and following topics will be discussed: What should a country school do for a boy on the farm, by Howard Bream and Miss Ruth Trostle; School economy by Mary Rudisill and Edith Mickleby; What points should be made prominent in teaching arithmetic, by John Black and Willis Appled.

The meeting at Mummaburg came to order by singing America. The minutes were read and approved. The constitution committee reported their desire to adopt the constitution. It was adopted and signed by the teachers present. On request of the Arendtsville teachers they were considered members of the meeting. The roll was called to which twelve teachers responded. Music, "Onward Marching;" Recitation, Viola Strasbaugh; Recitation, Welly Leatherman; How may the home and school work together? Mr. Calvin Cluck; Union gives strength, learn the parents, visit them often, agreement between teachers and parents, invite parents to visit, show respect toward parents. Points were given by Mr. Stover, Mr. C. A. Hartman, Miss Anna Hartman; co-operation with parents, inquire continually into the homes, be friendly and civil. Recitation, Susie Deardorff; Recitation, Laura Wilson; Essay, Miss Starnier, "Composition;" Singing by six little girls; Recitation, Clarence Leathern, Recitation, Alva Keller; Reading, Bela Bucher; Chinese Education, Alma Henry; Schools simply furnished three stages and three grades of study, three examinations from which they receive government positions, characters; Recitation, Orpha Cullison; Why do teachers' meetings often lack interest? Mr. M. E. Hartman. Mr. Hartman not being present remarks were given by other teachers. Teachers do not attend and if they do not take an interest in the different subjects. Recitation, Blanche Diehl; Recitation, Alma Cluck; Solo, Anna Diehl. What incentives are most helpful in character training? Mr. Fred Taylor. Character is the final point necessary to secure positions. Relate pupils to some illustrious man. Tell the pupils where they are wrong, be with them in their play and correct where necessary, teach fellowship and honesty. Current Events. Teachers. Controversy of Cook and Peary Cook expects in the near future his plans before University of Copenhagen. Floods, White Plague, Andrew Carnegie has given 400 acres upon which to erect a sanatorium. Collection 88 cts. Music, "America;" adjournment. Meet at Rocky Grove Nov. 19.

The second meeting of the Liberty Township Teachers' Association was held at Grayson's school, Friday evening, Oct. 22. The meeting was called to order by the president, W. P. Scott's Emulsion is the original—has been the standard for thirty-five years.

There are thousands of so-called "just as good" Emulsions, but they are not—they are simply imitations which are never as good as the original. They are like thin milk—SCOTT'S is thick like a heavy cream.

If you want it thin, do it yourself—with water—but don't buy it thin.

A Max O'Rell Story.

Before he attained fame with his various books M. Blouet (Max O'Rell), who was for several years French master at St. Paul's school, related how he obtained his post there. After two or three earlier applicants had returned unsuccessful from their interview with Dr. Walker, who was at the time headmaster of the school, M. Blouet's turn came.

"I want," said the doctor after a few words, "a French master who can preserve discipline. My last was a perfect gentleman and a good fellow, but he could not keep the classes in order. The end of it was that after being much worried by one of the boys the poor fellow went home and shot himself."

"Sir," replied Max O'Rell, "that is where my countryman made a little mistake. I should have shot the boy."

The doctor rose, says M. Blouet, and grasped my hand.

"M. Blouet," he exclaimed, "you are my French master!"—London Captain

Tips Costlier Than Treats.

They were going out of the Waldorf when he saw her look so longingly in at the big, beautiful roomful of white tables laden with roses that he said, "Will you go in and have a cup of tea or something?"

She assented willingly.

"Your hat and overcoat, sir," said the waiter firmly. "You are not allowed to sit in here with your overcoat on."

"But," objected he, "I shall stay only a few minutes."

"No matter, sir," said the waiter and took his hat and overcoat with an air of determination and disappeared.

"That's the third time," sighed he, "that I have started to go home, met somebody and parted from my hat and coat to treat them. If it happens again the tips to the waiters for keeping my hat and coat will amount to more than the sum I have paid for the treats."—New York Press.

A Bad Mixup.

"Say," remarked one government clerk to another, "I'm up against it good and proper."

"What's the trouble?" queried g. c. No. 2

"I got two medical certificates from two different doctors yesterday," explained the party of the first part. "One was a certificate of health for a life insurance company, and the other was a certificate of illness to be sent to my chief with a petition for two weeks' leave of absence."

"Oh, that's nothing," rejoined his fellow clerk, "I've done that myself."

"Yes," continued the other, "but I mixed the certificates in mailing. The ill health certificate went to the insurance company and the certificate of good health went to my chief. See?"—Chicago News

Capture of Carey Black

Two strangers, Sergeant Smith and Trooper Booth of B Troop, Pennsylvania State Police, who had ostensibly been hunting game in the mountains in northern part of Adams County ran down their quarry early Monday afternoon of last week in the person of Carey Black, and in the capture of Black the identity of the hunters became known.

Nearly three weeks ago warrants were issued by District Attorney Rhey, of Cumberland county, for Israel Patterson and Black, who had been hiding in the mountains in the western end of Cumberland county, in the lonely and densely wooded district known as the Huckleberry Land. State Policemen finally ran Patterson down.

Black, against whom a warrant was also issued for felonious shooting, escaped into Adams county when he heard of the arrest of Patterson. Black sent his wife to her home in the mountains in Menallen township near Weaverville a week or more ago, and gradually drifted across the mountains himself.

The two State Policemen followed him closely, however, and when the pursuit got too hot, Black fled with his wife to a little shack far up on the mountain side, which commanded a view for miles of the roads leading up to it. Any one approaching the mountain could be readily seen, and it was Black's wife, the officers believe, who kept him tipped off whenever they got within sight of the shack. Time and again they got close to the shack when they were positive Black was there. When they reached it he was gone. Now and then they noticed Black's wife appear for an instant in the doorway of the hut as they climbed to the mountain. It was at these times, too, the officers believe, that she gave her husband a signal of some sort to make tracks for the forest.

Sergeant Smith and Trooper Booth gave up approaching the shack from the southward. Early Monday of last week, a climb from the other side of the mountain was begun, and the two came upon the cabin from the top of the mountain. Both the State Policemen were armed with double barreled shot guns containing bird shot, although their heavy Colts swung at their hips.

When Black came out upon the porch he looked off toward the muzzles of the guns of the stranger huntman. Backing toward the shanty, he drew an old-fashioned horse pistol. One of the State Policemen promptly fired a load of bird shot at Black's legs. A couple of the shot bit into his knee and he sank to the ground, the fight all out of him. The officers found over twenty shooting irons in the cabin, guns and revolvers, all loaded.

Black was brought to Gettysburg and taken to Todd Hospital, Carlisle where the shot were removed. He will likely occupy a cell in Carlisle jail until November court.

The paper upon which Black was committed was a commitment issued by W. P. S. Otto, of Hantsdale, on October 13, in which he is charged with felonious assault and battery on oath of Edward Sampson, the crime being alleged to have taken place on July 15.

Carey Black has lived in Menallen township this county and is well known in that part of the county. About fifteen years ago he was arrested on a charge of larceny, plead guilty and spent two months in the jail here by way of punishment.

This is one of the most popular numbers of this most popular line. So many women have found it exactly meets their particular requirements.

Simple Cure For Pimples

There is only one way to obtain a clear transparent and flawless complexion: massage treatment makes the skin flabby, the so-called beauty creams containing oily or other greasy substances, fill up the pores of the skin preventing them from doing their work properly, and also induce the growth of a fine fuzzy hair on the face. If you would have a face entirely free from Pimples, Blisters, Eczema, Black heads and kindred diseases of the skin get the following prescription put up at any reliable Drug Store and your troubles will soon be over. Clear skin one-half ounce, Ether one ounce, Alcohol seven ounces. Mix, shake well and apply to the face night and morning, allowing it to remain at least ten minutes, the longer the quicker results you will have. In extreme cases apply four or five times daily.

The filmy powder deposits on the face may be wiped off after a reasonable time. Do not use soap, instead, wash the face with oat meal and a little powderedorris root tied up in a cheese cloth bag, and no matter how bad your face is, or what the cause may have been, this will surely cure it. This prescription is perfectly harmless and can be used on the most delicate skin.

CURES REMOVE DOUBT ABOUT ECZEMA CURE

Read What Your Druggist Says About Oil of Wintergreen Compound.

The People's Drug Store submits the following to the readers of the Compiler:

For several years we have announced with our recommendation, that we had found a positive cure for eczema; a simple skin wash, oil of wintergreen compounded with other healing ingredients.

Yet we know there are people right in this town who have eczema, and still have never tried this remedy.

We have, therefore, arranged with the D. D. D. Laboratories of Chicago for a special offer of a trial bottle at 25 cents instead of the $1.00 bottle as regularly sold.

We offer this trial bottle with our recommendation and assurance that just as soon as the patient washes his itching skin, this mild liquid will take the itch away instantly. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

Exciting Football Game.

The Gettysburg—Dickinson football game on last Saturday at Carlisle attracted as great a crowd as ever witnessed a game between the two institutions and college spirit ran at its height. Between four and five hundred persons attended the game from Gettysburg. The special train carried 323 passengers. A number went over on the early train. Gettysburg College made a highly creditable showing in the parade at Carlisle before the game began, there being more people in line than in the Dickinson parade. The Citizen's Band of Gettysburg led the procession, followed by autos, citizens and collegemen.

The greater part of the first half was splendidly fought and it looked as though Gettysburg was the better team. Two beautiful forward passes were made by the Gettysburg team and they held up their end of the line in fine shape until Nebinger with a 40 yard run made a touchdown for Dickinson and the first half ended in score of 6 to 0 in favor of Dickinson. The second half was well fought but the game was better played by their opponents and this half ended the game with a total score of 14 to 0 against Gettysburg. The contest was exciting and both sides helped along the enthusiasm with singing, band playing and yells. Both teams suffered repeatedly for holding, the referee holding them to close observance of the rules of the game.

Tomorrow's Breakfast — Have it Shot from Guns

Surprise your folks tomorrow morning with a dish of Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice.

Then let them pass judgment.

Go back to the old foods if your folks think them better. But we know that you won't go back.

These are curious foods, but not made to be curious. The object was to make them digestible.

They are exploded by steam for the simple purpose of blasting the starch granules to pieces.

But the result is crisp, gigantic grains, made four times as porous as bread.

The result is unbroken, nut-like grains, ready to melt in the mouth. Foods that the children like.

They are liked so well that seventeen million dishes were consumed last month. Now it is your turn to try them.

Puffed Wheat—10c Puffed Rice—15c

These are the foods invented by Prof. Anderson, and this is his curious process:

The whole wheat or rice kernels are put into sealed guns. Then the guns are revolved for sixty minutes in a heat of 550 degrees.

That fierce heat turns the moisture in the grain to steam, and the pressure becomes tremendous.

ORCHARDWORK FOR FARMERS

SPRAYING WHEN THE LEAVES HAVE FALLEN FROM TREES.

Directions in Detail of Quantity of Material Needed for Each Tree.

Following information was given by Professor H. A. Safford, State Zoologist, Harrisburg, Pa., as to the spraying of trees after the leaves have fallen from them. It is an easy matter to spray trees after the leaves have fallen from them. It is an easy matter to spray trees after the leaves have fallen from them. It is an easy matter to spray trees after the leaves have fallen from them.

The best thing you can do for trees with San Jose scale is to boil seven pounds of sulfur and twenty-two pounds of lime in enough water to boil it, using anything but a copper vessel. It will not injure iron. Stir it occasionally. After it has boiled for fully an hour, strain it, and add enough water to make a total bulk of fifty gallons. Water can be added during the process of straining and will help to wash it through the strainer. Do not use a cloth strainer for the fibers or little threads may go through and help clog the nozzle. The best kind of a strainer is one with a straining wire put across the bottom in such a way that it will be higher at one side and lower at the other, or one built like a cone standing upright and pointing upward with the funnel. The best material to use in making this strainer is brass wire cloth, with about thirty meshes to the inch. You can have such a strainer made by any tinsmith at a cost of about one dollar.

"Spray your trees thoroughly after the leaves drop. There is no use to spray for scale now while the leaves are on. Do this when the wind is blowing slightly in another direction, and when it blows in another direction spray them again. Be sure that you touch every speck of the bark from tip of the most remote branches to the base of the trunk. Coat them so there is not a spot missed. If you do this faithfully and thoroughly, you will be surprised at the beneficial results that will appear next summer, and which will pay you many times over for your efforts. In addition to the spraying, cut or prune back the trees severely, or in proportion to the amount of injury, removing not only the dead but also the dying wood."

Painting Trunks of Fruit Trees.

A physician, who is interested in fruit culture, wrote to Professor H. A. Safford, State Zoologist, Harrisburg, Pa., in reference to painting trees with white lead and linseed oil, as a protection against borers, as follows: "In the Reading Eagle I saw a report of your demonstration given at the Poor House grounds at Shillington, showing the advantage of painting trunks of trees with white lead and raw linseed oil for borers. We have done this, but since heard that some Shillington fruit growers lost a great number of trees by this method. I write to you, asking as to the advantage of this treatment, and if there is danger of smothering the trees by painting them."

The answer of State Zoologist Safford follows: "Replying to your letter of recent date, I beg to say that I am deeply interested in your statement that you have heard that the Shillington fruit growers lost a number of trees by painting them with white lead and linseed oil. I must acknowledge that this is news to me, as I have not been informed concerning such loss.

However, I do know that tens of thousands of trees have been painted with this material in this State without injury to them. Of course, you understand that I recommend painting only apple, pear and quince trees, as there is no advantage in painting peach trees, and the last named is more delicate than the others. Nevertheless, two years ago I painted my young peach trees, and this year took my most abundant and best crop of peaches from the trees that had been painted.

I can not believe that painting has hurt the trees to which you refer, unless "boiled" oil or impure material were used. I should like to be informed as to just what persons lost their trees by painting them: how many they lost, and under what conditions. I should then like to trace up this information and see what material was used, and where it was procured. I really think there is no danger when raw oil and pure lead are used.

I have seen tens of thousands of trees painted in Adams county by the extensive fruit growers of that county without any danger to any of the trees. They are continuing it after four or five years of successful practice.

"The advantage of painting the trunks of apple, pear and quince trees is, that the borers are kept out during the summer time, and the rabbits and mice are not nearly so liable to gnaw them in the winter. I think there is no advantage in painting peach and plum trees unless it be for rabbits and mice, and therefore, do not recommend it."

How He Worked the Artist.

This account of how an inthoutie friend of the great artist Kyosai obtained one of the artist's drawings is from Mrs. Ruth Palmer's "Letters From Japan."

Kyosai, a Japanese artist, had asked out right for a sketch. So his friend began the negotiation by offering the artist an excellent dinner. When Kyosai had drunk deeply and seemed in a mellow humor his host called for drawing materials, saying that he felt an artistic fancy taking possession of him. No one was surprised, as Japanese gentlemen often amuse themselves in this way after a feast. The servant then brought an enormous sheet of white paper and spread it on the floor with the brushes and Indian ink beside it. The crafty host, without looking at his guest, sank on his knees and began to draw, apparently absorbed in his occupation, but intentionally producing weak and incoherent lines. Kyosai watched the feeble effort in silence and growing irritation, and at last jumped up, dashed the tyro aside and tore the brush out of his hand, exclaiming: "Out of the way, you wretched bungler! I will teach you how to draw!" And the result was a priceless sketch, which remained in the possession of the wily entertainer.

HIS OWN MEDICINE

BY CAROLINE LOCKHART

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

"Don't kill yourself to-night; wait until to-morrow," said Turner, the barkeep, in a soothing but unemotional voice. "Never mix business with pleasure."

"But, Turner, you don't understand, you don't understand a-tall. She don't love me—nobody loves me." Helm of the Wind River Lumber Company laid his proud head on the bar and burst into tears.

"That's because you don't know how to make her love you. You don't show no more sabs than a rabbit," replied the barkeep, coldly.

"Tell me what she says; tell me what she says, and I'll do it!" Helm clasped his hands and lifted his streaming eyes pleadingly to the barkeep's stern face.

Turner's voice took on an authoritative tone.

"When she goes into one of those tantrums, then's when you want to stand up on your hind legs and let her know you are boss. Keep a stiff upper lip and be cool and kam. Nothing scares a woman like dignity. You might say: 'Woman, this rumpus must cease. I cannot permit my peace of mind to be disturbed by the rancidness of a hysterical female. The strain of my business life is such that I must have perfect rest in my home. If you cannot control yourself, you had better pack up and make your mother a long visit.'"

"Thash great!" said Helm, his eyes shining with admiration through his tears. "But, his face fell, 'shay, she might go. You don't know my wife—perfect' branch', reglar mustang when she's mad."

"Women are all alike. You've got to make 'em feel the iron hand in the glove."

"Iron hand in the glove—thash good!" Helm gurgled with pleasure. "Go out now, this minute, 'n pair gloves fr m' iron hand."

Turner watched him with contemptuous eyes until the swinging doors fanned the air behind him.

"Buffaloed!" he muttered, "plumb buffaloed!"

Turner, broad-shouldered, iron-jawed, with a heavy black mustache drooping over a cynical mouth, towered above the polished bar in the only hotel in White River City, Wyo. Without doing anything in particular to earn it, he had acquired the reputation of being a "bad man." He had dropped into Wind River City one evening at sunset and stayed, and no person had the temerity to inquire into that past in regard to which he showed such singular reticence.

Turner had a peculiar position in the community. He was the recipient of the heart confidences of every man who patronized his bar. After 12 o'clock at night the married men practically stood in line waiting to tell him why they could not get along with their wives. His advice was valued by the younger men, who consulted him at critical points in their love affairs. In some indefinable way, like the acquisition of his reputation for ferocity, Turner was believed to know the heart of woman—like a book. He interpreted their moods and actions to anxious cowpunchers and range riders. The measures he suggested for the subduing of too high-spirited women were generally heroic, but this only increased the feeling of awe for him, it being firmly believed that Turner would not hesitate to follow the advice he doled out so generously to others.

In the corner of the bar a youthful cowpuncher sat with the high heels of his elaborately stitched boots hooked over the top rung of his chair. His cheeks were round and rosy, his bushy blonde curls looked like a bunch of excelsior, and a sweet smile of contentment played about his girlish mouth. Fixing his absent gaze upon the barkeep, he suddenly realized that person was disengaged and he unwound some six feet of height and stood erect.

"Let's have something smooth and agreeable," he said, in a soft drawl.

"Things coming all right at the half-way house?" inquired Turner, carelessly, as he mopped the bar with his towel.

"Was comin' some this afternoon."

"So?"

"Had quite a little session with the old man. Took my gun and went over to ask for Jessie. Put it to him straight out behind the house, where he was mendin' a harness. Old man flew in one door for his gun and I flew in the other. We met in the middle; but there was a sewin' machine agent there and he thought so was after him for talking to the old man's wife. Agent got the drop on both of us. Set the old man down in a chair and backed me clean out to my horse. Amusin' old cuss, Jessie's pap; hollered after me that he'd shoot me on sight."

"What you aim to do?"

"Do? Jessie's movin' her clothes out into the sage brush and we are goin' to run off to-morrow night."

He looked expectantly for an answering smile on the barkeep's face. "Sweetness," said Turner, impressively, addressing him by the sobriquet which his innocent face had earned for him, "you're making a big mistake, you're beginning wrong."

"What's the matter?" inquired the young man.

ogy. The foundation of love is respect, and how can any woman respect a man who lets his father-in-law insult him?"

"Sweetness" jaw dropped.

"He wasn't really insultin'," he explained. "He was just goin' to shoot me up. Old man's harboring a gretch against me ever since I sold him an outlaw horse for his wife to drive. But I can't make him eat dirt; he's handier with a gun than I be."

"Taint your business to do it, it's the girl's. You ought to insist that she make the old man apologize for the effect it will have upon her afterwards."

"Insist? Say, you never saw my Jessie girl, I guess."

"Women are women," replied the barkeep, cynically.

"Some women is," responded Sweetness.

"I hate to see you make a bad get-away," continued the barkeep.

"If you sure think I ought to—"

Said Sweetness, dubiously.

"Sure I do," declared Turner. "I'm looking ahead for you—peering into the future."

"I wish you'd peer a little more and see if she's goin' to fire me for tryin' to make her respect me," said Sweetness, grimly.

"You're taking no risks whatsom-ever," Turner's tone was positive.

"You can't lose a woman once she's good and stuck on you."

A hubbub of feminine voices arose in the hotel office. The closeness of matrimony had in nowise numbed Sweetness' interest in such sounds, and Turner said, in response to his look of inquiry: "A bunch of she tourists from New York on their way to the Yellowstone."

"Do you think we would really dare?" The question in a pleasing contralto was waited into the bar.

"Yes, ma'am," came the clerk's business-like voice. "Plenty of ladies go in to look at the elk heads and the pictures."

"I'll tell you what we will do," said a deliberate voice. "We'll send for Turner. She looks so respectable."

"They're goin' to send for you," Sweetness whispered, excitedly.

"They said she—" There was a strange look in Turner's eyes and a singular hoarseness in his voice.

A renewal of the hubbub in the office heralded the coming of the other Turner.

"Turner, we want you to go into the bar with us while we look at the pictures."

"Yes, miss, but I loathe the grog shops."

The barkeep gripped the edge of the bar and a hunted look leaped into his face as he heard the smug voice.

"Rodgers!" he called to the barber, whose alleged mind was centered upon the game of pool he was playing with the pastry cook, "come and take my place a few minutes."

"Cert," said the flip barber, as he chalked his cue with maddening deliberation.

The shrill chorus in the office was coming nearer.

"Hurry up!" The sharpness in the barkeep's voice made the freeze-out players lift their eyes—there was a note of frenzy in it.

Turner had reached the end of the bar when the swinging doors parted. A small woman in a walking skirt and an alpine hat in which the quill bristled aggressively led a procession of excited young women. The barkeep's quivering gasp was audible some distance away as he dropped on his hands and knees and started to crawl to the door which led to the washroom.

The cold eyes of the person in the alpine hat fell upon the singular object on the floor.

"Gustave!"

The muscles of the barkeep's face twitched nervously, and he stopped in his flight like a well-trained horse at the voice of its master.

"So-o-o!" The long-drawn word reeked with satisfaction. "This is where you are, is it?" The wiry figure stiffened for battle. "Liar! to deceive me! Coward! to run from me! Scoundrel! to desert me!"

Helm waited breathlessly for Turner's scathing reply. He had returned with a pair of sheepskin gloves in his iron hand. Sweetness stood rigid in the intensity of his interest. The freeze-out game was suspended.

"Amelia"—no one recognized the plaintive voice—"don't be hard on me, Amelia!"

Turner, the barkeep, resembled nothing so much as a greyhound which has been kicked. It seemed not to occur to him that he could rise from his knees.

"Excuse me, miss"—the woman turned to one of the astonished group behind her—but he's my husband what I've caught at last."

"Get up!" she cried, advancing upon the cowering form. "Get up! I'll see you upstairs!" She stamped her foot.

Turner scrambled to his feet and the swinging doors hid the wilted sage from the eyes of the petrified barroom.

Some European Populations.

According to Dr. Bertillon, although in France in 1907 statistics showed an increase in population of 26,000, Germany could show nearly 800,000, Great Britain 300,000 and Austria 400,000. The doctor makes some significant comparisons. In 1851 France possessed, as did Germany, 35,000,000 inhabitants; to-day she has 39,000,000 against Germany's 62,000,000. Great Britain, which in 1851 had 27,000,000 inhabitants, has to-day 45,000,000. In 1851 the population of Austria was 31,000,000; at the present time it is 50,000,000. Italy during the same period has increased from 24,000,000 to 35,000,000. Dr. Bertillon adds that 1907 is the lowest relative birth rate of any year since the first year of the century.

Humor in Advertising.

It is agreed on all sides that as a rule humorous advertisements are to be avoided. Business is business, and the business-like ad is the one that counts. Nevertheless, it is interesting to come upon an odd, amusing or out of the ordinary advertisement. For instance, that of the photographer who made a specialty of baby photographs. His advertisement read:

"Bring your dear little babies. If they don't sit still I won't get cross. I was a baby once myself."

What is especially rare is to find an advertiser who will exhibit any candor about the negative qualities of his goods. It is all the more refreshing, then, to peruse the announcement of an ice-keeper in one of the smaller states who was evidently burning with a desire to tell the exact truth about his establishment:

"Not the largest hotel in the town, not newly furnished throughout, no free bus to train, but the best grub the market affords, but simply clean beds and good food, 25 cents to sleep, 25 cents to eat. Toothpicks and ice water thrown in. Try us. Pay up. And if not satisfied keep mum!"—London Answers.

The Forbidden Fruit.

The botanical curiosities of the island of Ceylon are replete with varied interest. One of them is "the forbidden fruit," or "Eve's apple tree." Its native name is diwl kadura, kadura signifying "forbidden" and diwl "tigers." The flower of this extraordinary production is said to emit a fine scent. The color of the fruit, which hangs from the branches in a very peculiar and striking manner, is very beautiful, being orange on the outside and a deep crimson within. The fruit itself presents the appearance of having had a piece bitten out of it. This circumstance, together with the fact of its being a deadly poison, led the Mohammedans on their first discovery of Ceylon, which they assigned as the site of paradise, to represent it as the forbidden fruit of the garden of Eden. For, although the finest and most tempting in appearance of any, it had been impressed, such was their idea, with the mark of Eve's having bitten it to warn men from meddling with a substance possessing such noxious properties.

Grief That Kills.

"My poor boy," said the beneficent old clergyman, who had encountered a young wail sobbing in the streets, "what ails you? Some case of dire distress has touched your heart chords no doubt?"

"No," sniffed the lad; "you're clear off your base, old kazoozicks. Me an' Snippy an' de rest of de fellies thinned the mangy old yellow cur up at Schwartz's grocery, an' while old Schwartz an' de gang followed de dog I sneaked back to de grocery to swipe dried apples. De Fido chased into Schmilt's orchard, an' de gang cribbed de sweetest peaches you ever seen, an' den dey smoked grapevine cigarettes and set the barn afire. I made a sashay into de apple barrel at de grocery, an' de delivery boy pasted me with a bed slat, an' it hurts yet, an' I didn't get to see de fire an' didn't get nothin' to eat, an' I wisht I wuz dead—de-gone it all!"—Bohemian Magazine.

His Advice.

A young genius named McCarthy went to Commodore Vanderbilt and gave him a suggestion which led the commodore to organize all the little railroads between New York and Chicago into one. Before McCarthy went to Vanderbilt he went to a friend for advice. Here is what his friend told him about the commodore:

"Don't let him scare ye. He's as full of power as a turbine. Has a good deal of whir in him. Likes resistance; so does every great force. He's fought a thousand difficulties. He'll take you for another 'n' pitch into ye, like as not. Don't let him scare ye. If he jumps on ye, jump on him. He'll enjoy it an' begin to respect ye. It's like puttin' a belt on the turbine—you'll take off a bit of his power and ease him down."—Denver News.

The Crimean Crime.

Kinglake was all for war. "He used to say," says Mme. Novikoff, "that peace would emasculate the world." Besides," he continued, "population when too dense is not at its best." He did not like Bright. Mme. Novikoff told Kinglake one day that Bright had made a curious remark about the Crimean statue in Pall Mall. "The inscription," he had said, "should be altered. The 'n' should be put before the word 'crime' and not at the end."—London Standard.

Charity.

It is an old saying that charity begins at home, but this is no reason it should not go abroad. A man should live with the world as a citizen of the world. He may have a preference for the particular quarter or square or even alley in which he lives, but he should have a generous feeling for the welfare of the whole of humankind.

Both.

"What are you talking about? A thing can't be a great help and a great drawback at the same time."

"I don't know. How about a hard plaster?"—Boston Transcript.

CHERISHED VIOLIN A WRECK

Sad and Ignominious Fate Met With by Musician's Highly Prized Instrument.

After being presented, bearing an inscription in letters of gold, to its owner on his winning the first prize at the Conservatoire at the outset of his career and having been played on by him day by day as he rose to a position of some eminence in his profession, a violin met with a sad and ignominious fate. The performer left the violin at the house of one of his pupils, whose mother gave a musical reception that evening. It was taken out of its case during the party, admired by connoisseurs and even played upon by amateurs. Then it was forgotten and laid down upon a chair without being put back into its case. Unfortunately a stout and shortsighted guest did not see it and sat upon the violin. The lady of the house, in despair, consulted the best authorities, but the most expert violin doctors failed to restore it to anything like a normal state of health. The instrument was crushed beyond healing and can never recover. The owner sued the lady and has obtained from the courts $100 damages and an order that the mortal remains of his violin be handed over to him. For, although the instrument is dead, what is left of it "nevertheless," as the tribunal feelingly observed, "constitutes for the plaintiff a precious memento of his first successes."—Paris Correspondent London Telegraph.

REFORMATION NOW THE AIM

Society No Longer Deals with Criminals with the Idea Solely of Punishment.

In nearly all the large cities there have been established courts for juvenile offenders where treatment is given according to the individual merits of cases and not according to the rigors of the law for adults.

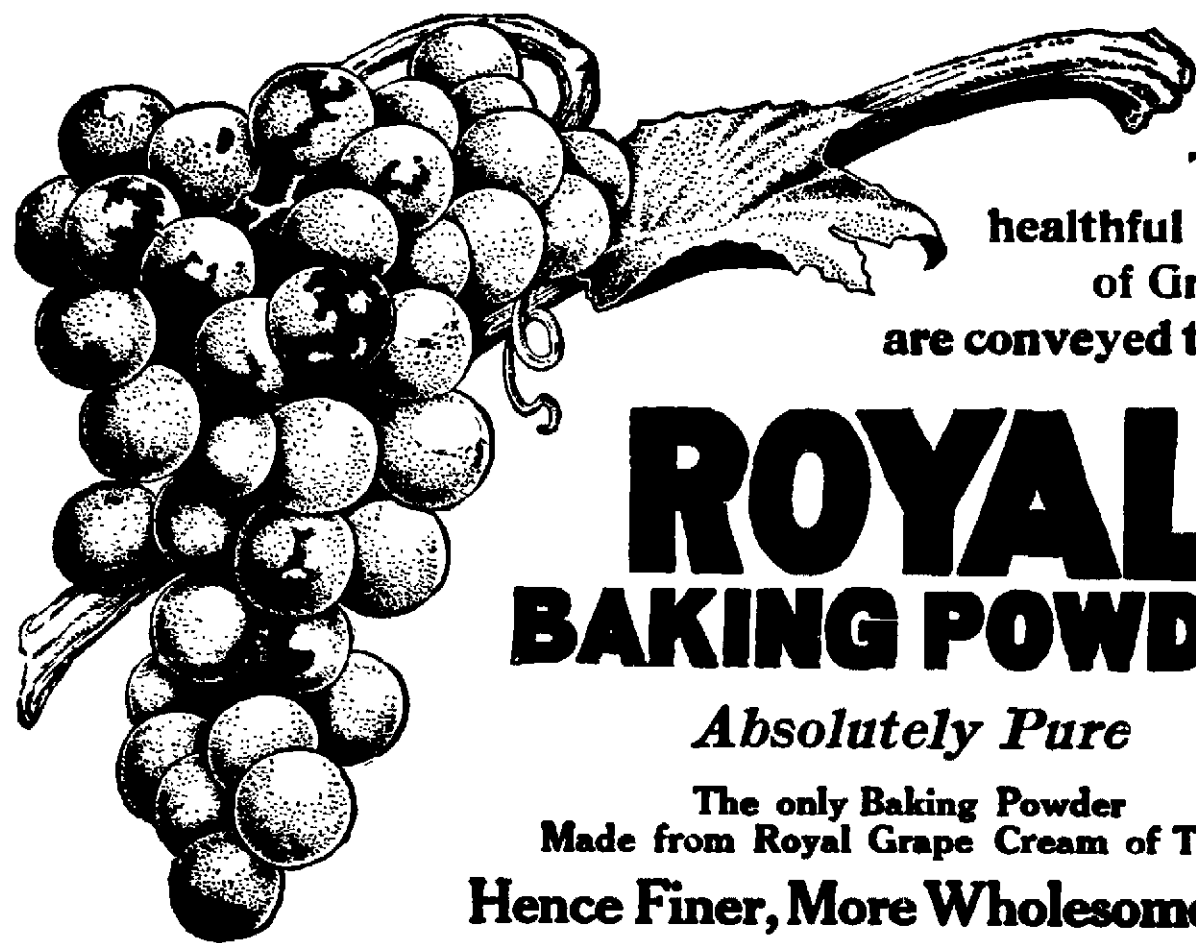

In some states adults are also treated in this manner. We have given up the old draconian spirit. A century ago there were about 100 crimes in England punishable by death. When it was proposed to raise the death penalty for theft from five shillings to ten it met with the most bitter opposition in parliament and many men of supposed wisdom announced that the country was done for, property no longer safe and society incapable of caring for itself. We are now trying to treat crime in a two-fold manner. To punish the offender and to reform him so that he will not prey upon the community so soon as he regains his freedom.

Especially is this necessary in the case of children. We must not give a dog a bad name, much less a potential citizen. The decision of the New York legislature is one that ought to be generally followed. We need to learn a great deal about criminology, a science which is just now in its infancy.

Artificial "Coffee" Factories.

According to the statistics of a Paris paper which has investigated the subject, there are no less than 106 factories in France for the manufacture of artificial coffee. These factories turn out 24,000 tons annually, while there are 568 such establishments in Austria-Hungary, including 412 for the manufacture of coffee from figs and in Germany nearly 15,000 hands are employed in the trade and the annual output is 100,000 tons.

It follows that a large quantity of "coffee" which we drink has not an atom of the real berry in it. The list of substances out of which it is manufactured is alarming. Cereals soaked with beer,

To Piano Buyers

There are many who buy but one piano during a lifetime. The reasons to give the Home Dealer this one sale instead of a stranger are as 99 to 0. Don't adopt the goose egg reason because you can't get rid of the stranger. Get rid of him because you propose to be a neighbor to the home dealer and because there may come a time when the buyer may want the home people to be neighbors to him.

Introducing the New CORSETS for Fall

The corset plays the first and important part in building the feminine toilet of today. Without the proper corset your gown cannot be a full success.

Our corset lines for Fall of '1909 are now complete—chief among them are the J. C. C. Corsets, which have been gaining new friends for the department season after season.

And with good reason, too, for never in our experience in the corset business did a line of corsets offer so many points of advantage.

To begin with, the styles are always correct from the standpoint of fashion. The construction is so good that every corset fits its particular type of woman accurately. The materials and workmanship are so good that the wear is all but doubled.

Corsets for all Forms
$1.00 to $5.00 the pair.
